CONGRATULATIONS! You've found it! Intentionally or not!

Why is this container placed here?
This is called a geocache and it belongs to the global hobby Geocaching.

Have you found it by accident?
Great! Please don't move or vandalize it. If you continue to read you'll get more information.

Is the container poorly placed?
Sometimes the container gets moved from it's original hiding place and sometimes it turns out that what once was a good hiding place isn't as good anymore. Please contact us at www.geocaching.com/help! We apologize for any inconvenience and we will help you to move the container!

What is Geocaching?
Simply its a kind of "treasure hunt" where one person hides a "treasure" (geocache) and then publish it's coordinates at www.geocaching.com. Other participants can then go and search for the "treasure" using their smartphone or GPS.

What does a geocache contain?
All geocaches contain a log book. They can also contain items for trade and trackables. More info about trackables can be found at: www.geocaching.com/track

Are there any rules?
Yes, the two most important rules are that when you find a geocache you need to sign the logbook with date and your username and if you take something from the geocache you must leave something of the equal or greater value. It's also important to replace the geocache exactly as you found it. If you want to you can also log your find online using the Geocaching app or the website. When logging online it's appreciated if you share your experience by writing some lines about it. Remember not to spoil anything about the geocache or how it's hidden in your log.

Can I participate?
Of course! Everyone is welcome to join! Visit www.geocaching.com for further information and to get started!
